They don't know where you are. Why tell them?

Mildred Harris in the "Borrowed Clothes"

THE voice of the tempter: "You like the pretty clothes and the wine and the nice food—why tell the family where we are?" And then, in another moment, Mary Kirk had to leap from a second-story window. Yet she loved him better than life. Why? And what was the end of it all? Don't fail to see beautiful Mildred Harris in "BORROWED CLOTHES," the finest live story of the whole year. Now playing.

DARING NIGHT ESCAPE DURING POLICE RAID IN "BORROWED CLOTHES"

Beautiful Mildred Harris Has Charming Role in Lois Weber's New Play.

OUTWITS VAMPIRE WOMAN.

The police! The girl stood frozen in horror as she heard the officers enter the front door. In an instant the danger of her situation was impressed upon her. She, a girl whose family name had been honored for its freedom from the stain of scandal, was now in the apartments of a vampire woman, in that woman's clothes and alone with a man who had maintained the establishment for that woman.

There was only one thing to do—get out—quick. Stuart urged her to leave.

"Think what it means, little girl," he murmured, to be found here. Go in there, indicating a room nearby.

As the police swarmed up the stairs, she shuddered, feeling that the next moment would bring arrest—and disgrace. She saw an open window, when the officers burst into the room they found nothing. The girl was outside, clinging to the tough vines of ivy which covered the side of the great mansion.

After a time the raiding party left. Mary, half dead, half climbed down the vine. A heavy storm was raging. Nearly exhausted, she started to run. After a minute her pace decreased to a walk. It was ten miles home and she was tired. But after what she had seen—his perfidy—that vampire woman—oh, if she had known! Tears mingled with raindrops as she struggled on.

Then dawn came. She covered her tired eyes with her hands as though to ward off the terrible accusation she saw in her father's eyes as he found her, a cuddled heap, on the front porch. Then he beat her.

And the other man—the man she loved yet hated now. Where was he? HIGH SCHOOL THEATRE

COMMENDATION OF A GREAT MAN.

To the Editor and Readers of the best widely known Race Journal of the Southland, The Dallas Express: Since Dr. J. S. Ladelle, D. D., the once honored pastor of Mt. Rose Baptist church, this city, is often asked about, and I am in a position to tell his many friends of him and his work in Little Rock, Ark., it is but justice to him and his admirers to let you know that he stands in the foremost ranks of the Baptist Ministry, in ability and deeds. It was on the 11th of March, that his services were solicited to hold a revival at his church or one of his churches in Little Rock, his needless to say that the revival at Collins St. was a record breaker in all the term implies. This is a historic brick church and are long suffered with burdened debts. Honor to whom honor is due.

Dr. J. S. Ladelle, had only been pastor of this great church one (1) year as to the date of his last rally, which resulted in the cancelling of a $3,000.00 debt and on the second Sunday in March, his people and friends raised in cash that day, $1,674 which paid the last note on the church, and they are rejoicing. Mrs. Emma Ladelle, deserves much praise in the way and manner she helps her husband raise money. She as well as Dr. J. E. Ladelle, broke his record in Arkansas as financiers, both pastor and his wife, Mrs. Ladelle, herself, with a few to number a club raised $326.00, winning the prize which was a Lady's Gold Bra-let Watch. The Arch St. Baptist church of the city of Little Rock, Mo. have elected Dr. Ladelle, its pastor, and to say it is doing nicely and great deal better with both churches than some other pastors with one church is putting it in the mildest tone. The Arch St. church is a great church, a cement block house of worship. Each church pays him $80.00 for two Sundays.

P. K. WHITE.

FRIENDSHIP BAPTIST CHURCH.

Services of March 30th.

Sunday school was interesting review, collection $17.70.

Preaching by pastor, subject, "Contrary Winds." Mark 6:48, text, for the winds were contrary unto them.

Introductory, relating the time and place of the storm, human efforts minus God equals naught, and the necessity of having Christ with us.

1. Strange winds and their effects.
(a). Strange wind and doctrines, caused many to depart from the faith first delivered unto the Saints, gives to many isms, called churches.
(b). They cause moral, social and spiritual debauchery.

(b). Ladies by experience. $118.00.

F. K. WHITE, Pastor.

Mrs. F. K. White, our pastor's wife spoke to the church and the many friends in an acceptable and appreciable way. Rev. T. L. Moiet, the president of the B. Y. P. U. presented to her as a surprise from the B. Y. P. U. $5.00 in token of our respects for our pastor's wife who took her leave back to their home in Muskogee, Okla., at this time other members and friends joined in giving a donation as follows to supplement the $5.00, making the total as a surprise, $11.45. She leaves us for home with our prayers and best wishes, bidding her welcome at any time. We love her as mother, for she is affable and kind, persuasive in advice, impressive in personality, she has made many new friends while here, and to know her is to love her. Our pastor, Dr. F. K. White, has launched a $1,000 rally in connection with his anniversary for June 8th. Every department, come at it, and in his name, and the cause of beautifying our church, we mean to raise it under his matchless and gallant leadership, by June 8th, still we are less than 200 members, but we have our Shepherd.

The following persons gave the following amounts:

Rev. T. L. Moiet, 25c; Rev. H. T. Adkins, 25c; Bro. H. Anthony, 25c; Sister Marie Tukes, 25c; Sister M. B. Cooper, 50c; Sister T. Pollard, 25c; Sister E. Amstrong, 25c; Bro. J. W. DEPEW MIXED IN HIS FACTS

Venerable New York Statesman a Little Ahead of Time in Use of Term "Highbrow."

Who were "the highbrows of forty years ago," of whom Chauncey M. Depew mixed in giving his recollections of Theodore Roosevelt at the Methodist preachers' conference? The venerable ex-senator, relating the circumstances of Mr. Roosevelt's political debut in 1880, quoted "a Republican district leader" as suggesting to him the nomination of the young Harvard graduate for assemblyman to placate the element in his district "which the boys call 'high brow,' living along Fifth avenue."

Was there "any such animal" at that time? It was four years before the appearance of the mugwump, who, though a highbrow according to his lights, was not the simon-pure article. He was not "a superior attitude toward the generality of mankind," but only toward certain political representatives of it. The real highbrow was yet to come.

Was Will Twain his inventor? Excursions into the origins of words are always hazardous, even in the case of contemporary coinage, but it appears to be sufficiently well authenticated that highbrow is a more recent product than Mr. Depew would have us suppose.

Indeed, highbrow got into the dictionary before highbrow, which is not cited in the Century of 1911 or the Webster of 1910, though it appears in the New Standard of 1913.

An octogenarian memory, though it is a marvelous storehouse of events, may at times deceive its possessor. What the district leader probably said was "silk stockings."

Mr. Depew has apparently merely confused the period at which the growing indulgence of the proletariat in silk stockings caused the term to be superseded by "highbrows."—New York World.

Mrs. Emma Allen of Dallas has returned from several months' stay in Oklahoma.

Scribbles of An Idler.

Coming down the back steps of the court-house the other day I picked up a piece of paper which contained the following notes on women: Suppose we had women firemen, the men would run to every fire, just to see the hose go up the ladder.

If the fire bell rang at noon, it would be along toward lamp-lighting time, before they could find and fix their rats and poifs.

Men would run in false alarms to see the women are men slide down the poles.

It is hard for a woman to climb the ladder of life alone and it would not be but for men standing around rubbering.

If there was a jury composed of six men and six women and they could not agree and had to be locked in the jury room all night, what would be the verdict?—guilty.

Women have the best of men when they wore long skirts they held up trains every day, and were never tried for it, but a man who holds up a train is guilty of a penitentiary offense.

I believe in woman suffrage because a woman has as much right to suffer as a man.

The candidate for office wants voters.

The old maid wants voters. Stop to think of it half our parents have been women.

The woman who is made up of powder and paint often laces till she faints.

92ND DIVISION.

Composed by Mrs. M. S. Lowery.

We used to think the Negro didn't count for much. Light fingered in the melon patch and chicken yard and such. Much mixed in points of morals and absurd in point of dress. The butt of droll cartoonists and the target of the press. But we've got to reconstruct our views on color more or less. Now we know about the 92nd Division. Some where in France.

When the rain of shot was falling, with a song upon his lips— In the horror where such gallant lives went out in death eclipse; Face to face with German bullets, on the slope of the Rhine The Negro soldier showed himself another type of mind. Read the story of his courage, coldly, carefully who can The story of the 92nd Division. Somewhere in France.

They have heaped the French soil above their bodies both black and white— The strangely sorted comrades of that grand and glorious fight; And many a fair-skinned soldier goes whole and sound today For the valor of the Colored troops the battle record should say— And the Jim crow should be done forever in the U. S. A. All honor to 92nd Division. Somewhere in France.

And now they're coming home again; the record that they won Was such as shows we still have men, when men's work to be done. There wasn't one of them that flinched, each fellow stood the test— Where ever they were sent they sailed right in and gave their best. They didn't go away to play, they knew what they had to chance. So Hall! Hall! Hurrah! Hurrah! For the 92nd Division. Home again from France.
